The Pimsleur Method gives you quick command of Tagalog structure without tedious drills. Learning to speak Tagalog can actually be enjoyable and rewarding. The key reason most people struggle with new languages is that they aren't given proper instruction only bits and pieces of a language. Other language programs sell only pieces — dictionaries; grammar books and instructions; lists of hundreds or thousands of words and definitions; audios containing useless drills. They leave it to you to assemble these pieces as you try to speak. Pimsleur enables you to spend your time learning to speak the language rather than just studying its parts. When you were learning English could you speak before you knew how to conjugate verbs? Of course you could. That same learning process is what Pimsleur replicates. Pimsleur presents the whole language as one integrated piece so you can succeed. With Pimsleur you get:

In an age that was a Sunbeam Mixmaster in every kitchen and the arrival of the electric frying pan Mary's dedication to exploring 'foreign foods' set her apart from her contemporaries and made her a role model nonpareil for her now-famous daughter. In Recipes My Mother Gave Me Stephanie presents her mother's original work annotated by family reminiscences and culinary tips. It speaks of a time when recipes were swapped over morning tea and a biscuit rather than gleaned from glossy

In her autobiography The Story of My Life (1952) Enid Blyton says that from an early age she liked making up stories better than I liked doing anything else. As a child she would go to bed at night and stories would flood into her mind all mixed-up rather like dreams are but yet each story had its own definite thread—its beginning and middle and ending. Enid Blyton did not realise at the time that that was unusual remarking in a letter to psychologist Peter McKellar on 15th February 1953: I thought all children had the same 'night stories' and was amazed when one day I found they hadn't. She described her night stories as all kinds of imaginings in story form saying: Because of this imagining I wanted to write—to put down what I had seen and felt and heard in my imagination.&qu
